

FUTURE CONTINUOUS TENSE

The future continuous tense is employed to articulate actions that will be in a state of progress at a designated moment in the future. It is formed by using the auxiliary verb “will” followed by the verb “be” and the present participle form of the main verb. For example, “I will be studying” or “They will be playing.” This tense is often used to talk about future plans or actions that will be happening over a period of time.
