

IMPERATIVE SENTENCE

Imperative sentences play a crucial role in communication by conveying commands, requests, or instructions. They are characterized by their directness and assertiveness, making them highly effective in various contexts. The importance of imperative sentences lies in their ability to provide clear guidance, express urgency, and facilitate efficient communication.

Read more

Q1: Which sentence is an example of an imperative sentence?

- A: She is running in the park.
 - B: Can you pass the salt?
 - C: How beautiful the sunset is!
 - D: Turn off the lights, please.
-

Q2: What is the imperative form of the sentence 'You should study for the exam'?

- A: You must study for the exam.
 - B: You could study for the exam.
 - C: You have to study for the exam.
 - D: Study for the exam!
-

Q3: Which sentence is NOT an imperative sentence?

- A: Let's go to the movies tonight.
 - B: Please clean your room.
 - C: Stop talking during the movie.
 - D: How delicious the pizza tastes!
-

Q4: What is the imperative verb in the sentence 'Pass me the book, please'?

- A: pass
 - B: me
 - C: the
 - D: please
-

Q5: Which sentence is an example of a negative imperative sentence?

- A: Run as fast as you can!
 - B: Please close the door.
 - C: Don't touch the hot stove!
 - D: Can you bring me some water?
-

Q6: What is the subject of an imperative sentence?

- A: It is always the word 'you.'
 - B: There is no subject in an imperative sentence.
 - C: The subject can vary depending on the context.
 - D: The subject is the person giving the command.
-

Q7: Which sentence is an example of a polite imperative sentence?

- A: Stop making so much noise!
 - B: Could you please pass me the salt?
 - C: Don't forget to call me later.
 - D: Can you help me with this task?
-

Q8: What is the purpose of using imperative sentences?

- A: To ask questions and seek information.
 - B: To express emotions or exclamations.
 - C: To give commands, instructions, or requests.
 - D: To make statements or convey information.
-

Q9: What is the correct form of the imperative sentence 'Be quiet!' in a polite manner?

- A: You should be quiet.
 - B: Could you please be quiet?
 - C: I want you to be quiet.
 - D: You have to be quiet.
-

Q10: Which sentence is an example of an exclamatory imperative sentence?

- A: Please don't forget to bring your umbrella.
 - B: Run for your life!
 - C: Can you give me a hand?
 - D: Let's have a picnic in the park.
-

Answers

Q1: D - Turn off the lights, please.

Q2: D - Study for the exam!

Q3: D - How delicious the pizza tastes!

Q4: A - pass

Q5: C - Don't touch the hot stove!

Q6: B - There is no subject in an imperative sentence.

Q7: B - Could you please pass me the salt?

Q8: C - To give commands, instructions, or requests.

Q9: B - Could you please be quiet?

Q10: B - Run for your life!